Join us virtually online or in Fairbanks, Alaska for our 2022 Technical Conference. This conference will emphasize the strong relationship AGS and its members have with the University of Alaska geoscience programs, and the contributions of early Alaskan geologists that formed a strong foundation for current and future research throughout the State.

The 2022 AGS Technical Conference will be held April 23, 2022, on the campus of the University of Alaska Fairbanks. Due to ongoing covid restrictions this will be an in-person/online hybrid meeting. In person attendance will be first come-first serve for the first 40 people to select in-person attendance upon registration.

Abstracts are due April 8. Please visit our website at [ALASKA GEOLOGICAL SOCIETY - Home \(alaskageology.org\)](http://ALASKA GEOLOGICAL SOCIETY - Home (alaskageology.org)) to register and submit an abstract.

How can you help today?

1. Plan on attending this technical conference. Please encourage your friends to attend.
2. Submit an abstract for a 10-minute talk and plan on presenting.
3. Submit a poster abstract.

Schedule

Saturday, April 23 - Conference, UAF Campus, 8 am - 5 pm

Saturday, late afternoon, April 23 – Museum of the North behind the scenes tour

Sponsorship

Our programs are managed by volunteers and 100% of your donations go toward scholarships and community outreach. We ask that you consider a donation to the technical conference in April 2022.

To help, we ask you to become a Gold ($500), Silver ($250), or Bronze ($100) contributor. These funds will directly go to financing the conference and future scholarships.

All sponsors will receive recognition in publications and posters.

To donate to the AGS 2022 Technical Conference email treas@alaskageology.org. Online process will be available on our website soon.

We want to thank you for supporting Alaska Geological Society and University of Alaska
